Abstract

Dr. Charles Yesalis has studied the role of anabolic-androgenic steroids (AAS) and other performance enhancing drugs in sports and society for over twenty-five years. He completed his undergraduate and graduate degrees at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor before pursuing and receiving his doctorate at Johns Hopkins University. His most recent position was Professor of Health Policy and Administration at Pennsylvania State University. Yesalis has consulted with many groups and testified before the United States Congress about performance enhancing drugs. He was married and has one daughter. The Yesalis Papers further contain the Dr. Charles D. Kochakian Papers; Kochakian was a pioneer in steroid research. The knowledge attained by Dr. Yesalis on performance enhancing drugs is critical in the ever continuing battle to control their use and abuse.

Biographical Note

Charles Yesalis earned his Bachelor's of Science in Zoology in 1969 and his Masters of Public Health in Medical Care Administration in 1972 from the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. He further completed his Doctorate of Science in Health Care Organization at the John's Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health in 1975, remaining as a professor there for one year. He taught at the College of Medicine at the University of Iowa from 1976 until 1986. He then became Professor of Health Policy and Administration and Exercise and Sports Science at Pennsylvania State University, beginning in 1986 and ending in 2006. Yesalis was married to Diane E. Yesalis and together they have a daughter, Marcy Marie.

The research undertaken by Dr. Charles Yesalis focuses on the utilization of anabolic-androgenic steroids (AAS) for non-medical purposes. He has written books on the subject of steroids in sports and has testified numerous times before the United States Congress to comment on legislation designed to control the use and abuse of human growth hormone and anabolic steroids (AS). Many groups have called upon the expertise of Dr. Yesalis to better understand and control the use of anabolic steroids and performance enhancing drugs. They include: the U.S. Office of National Drug Control Policy, the National Collegiate Athletic Association, the National Strength and Conditioning Association, The U.S. Olympic Committee, The National Football League Players Association, the Drug Enforcement Administration and more.

Yesalis incorporated the work of Dr. Charles D. Kochakian into the book he edited, Anabolic Steroids in Sport and Exercise and Dr. Kochakian's Papers are subsumed within the Charles Yesalis Papers residing at the Stark Center. Kochakian was a pioneer in studying the effects and mechanics of anabolic steroids, performing many tests on animals like rabbits, mice and others to determine how steroids operated and what benefits and dangers they posed. Yesalis has stated that the biggest problem with performance enhancing drugs is that the drug tests cannot keep up with the substances that athletes employ to gain an unfair advantage. As soon as a steroid test is perfected, athletes simply move on to growth hormone or another designer steroid for which no test exists (or, indeed, could exist because the testers do not know the drug is extant).

Charles Yesalis continues to be one of the foremost experts and critics in the field of the interaction between sports and performance enhancing drugs. With the huge sums of money now swirling through the world of sports and the reality that employment for professional athletes can depend on winning and losing, the incentive to cheat is great. The work of Dr. Yesalis will continue to be invaluable to anyone who cherishes fair play in sports and the well being of society as a whole.
